

Growth Groups

Common Questions

What happens at a Growth Group?

You've probably seen our small groups around and not even realized it. They look like friend's having lunch, teams playing sports, or studying together. At the core, our Growth Group is a small gathering of people. It is acquainted with God's people.

How often does a Growth Group meet?

Our growth groups meet for three seasons a year – Fall, Winter, and Spring. During the seasons, most groups will meet once a week. Even if you can't meet every week, we encourage you to join a group. There is value in being part of something that can bring meaning and a sense of community into your life.

How long does a typical Growth Group stay together?

Most groups meet for a season. This way, new people can join groups easily and regularly. The season approach also allows you to try multiple groups each year. As you form relationships, some groups choose to stay together, but new members are always welcome.

Is there childcare available?

Childcare varies from group to group. When you sign up for a group, the small group facilitator will indicate if childcare is available.

What if I don't like the first Growth Group I try?

The truth is, not everyone will find their first group right off the bat. We encourage you to select a few groups that may interest you, contact the leaders, and try out a couple different options before you choose which one is best for you. Whatever you do, don't give up. We believe there is a group that is right for everyone – including you!
